

Micro Technologies Security products to enter US Homeland market

Micro Technologies India Ltd has informed BSE that the Company and Girvan Institute of Technology has announced the signing of a partnership under which the two organizations would work together to introduce various Security products, developed by the Company, to meet the requirement of Homeland security products in the USA. Girvan's effort in the US will be to customize the products of the Company for the huge demand for Homeland security products in the US.

The Company over the years has developed a wide range of Security and IT Products and the product-range includes Embedded, Web-based and Client Server applications. The Company has developed innovative security software products, which provides Super Security solutions to various kinds of applications. The Company has spearheaded a movement against the onslaught of unpredictable calamity and has identified the need and requirement for comprehensive mechanism for combating any disaster through Natural or through human activities.

Girvan is an institute chartered to foster and support entrepreneurial business ventures, especially early-stage high-tech companies. The Institute was established with active support of NASA has two facilities, both in California in San Jose and Los Angeles area's aerospace and defense complex.

The Company expects this partnership to help the company enter the huge Security market in US with the active assistance and participation by Girvan.